Dr. David Lewis James, historian of Islamic art, died on 22 November 2012 at his home in Ronda in Spain, at the age of 71. He leaves a daughter and two sons.

A graduate in art from the University of Newcastle, his postgraduate studies at the University of Durham were, apart from Arabic language, entirely in the field of Islamic art, more especially miniature painting and calligraphy. In 1969 he was appointed Islamic curator at the Chester Beatty Library & Gallery of Oriental Art in Dublin, where he soon acquired a solid reputation in the field of Islamic manuscripts and related arts, supported by a number of significant scholarly publications, as well as some more popular articles, during the 1970s and 1980s. He later worked on secondment to the Nour Foundation in London, producing lavish scholarly catalogues of some of the finest MSS in the Khalili Collection. At both these institutions he acquired and demonstrated a particular expertise in the great Qur’ān MSS of the Mamlūk and ʿIlkhanid periods, which was enhanced by research in other important libraries and museums.

His career, however, came to an abrupt and disastrous halt in 1992, when he was convicted of the theft of items from the Chester Beatty Library, and served a jail sentence in Ireland. He confessed to the crime, acknowledging the justice of the verdict; to those who knew him best, this episode seemed to be a bout of uncharacteristic madness. But inevitably it cut him off from the rather narrow circle of scholars in his field, and from the institutions housing Islamic art and MSS.

After leaving Ireland he took up residence in a cottage at Ronda in Andalucia, and pursued a contented life there among local and visiting friends. He became an independent writer and scholar, turning increasingly to research on Arabic texts from early Islamic Spain: two of his scholarly studies and translations, from original MSS, have recently been published as monographs. He did not, however, lose interest in art: at his death his study of the illustrations in the Maqamat of Al-Ḥarîrî was in the press. His scholarly reputation is assured, despite the vicissitudes of his career.

G. Roper
David James: Bibliography

Books

Arab Painting (Edinburgh, London, 1978), 50 pp. (previously published in Marg XXIX/3, 1976);
Islamic Masterpieces of the Chester Beatty Library (London, 1981), 48 pp.;
Masterpieces of the Holy Quranic Manuscripts: Selections from the Islamic World (Kuwait, 1987), 112+XXIV pp. (Arabic & English);
Qur’ans of the Mamlûks (London, 1988), 271 pp. (with others);
Calligraphie islamique: textes sacrés et profanes. Islamic calligraphy: sacred and secular writings (Geneva, 1988);
The Master Scribes: Qur’ans of the 10th to the 14th Centuries AD (London, 1992), 240 pp. (The Nasser D. Khalili Collection of Islamic Art, II);
After Timur: Qur’ans of the 15th and 16th Centuries (London, 1992), 256 pp. (The Nasser D. Khalili Collection of Islamic Art, III);
Manuscripts of the Holy Qur’an from the Mamlûk Era (Riyadh, 1999), 279 pp. (New ed. of Qur’ans of the Mamlûks, London 1988);
Early Islamic Spain: the History of Ibn al-Qâfiya. A Study of the Unique Arabic Manuscript in the Bibliothèque Nationale de France, Paris, with a translation, notes and comments (Abingdon, 2009), 174 pp. (Culture and Civilisation in the Middle East, XV)

Articles

“Two medieval Arabic accounts of Ireland”, Journal of the Royal Society of Antiquaries of Ireland CVIII (1978), pp. 5—9;
“Celtic & Islamic art: a short survey and comparison”, Art About Ireland 1/4 (1979), pp. 10—4;
“The Moorish citadel of Ronda”, Azure IV (1979), pp. 8—9;
“An early Mosul metalworker: some new information”, Oriental Art XXVI/3 (1980), pp. 318—21 (in a manuscript in the Chester Beatty Library, Dublin);
“Kunststücke auf kleiner Fläche: islamische Lackmalerei auf Bucheinbänden, Dosen und Federrästen”, Ibid. VI, pp. 26—32;
“Lacquer items in the Chester Beatty Library”, Lacquerwork in Asia and Beyond, ed. by W. Watson. A colloquy held 22—24 June 1981 (London, 1982), pp. 318—32 (Colloquies on Art & Archaeology in Asia XI);
“Some observations on the calligrapher and illuminators of the Koran of Rukn al-Dîn Baybars al-Jâshâghî”, Muqarnas II (1984), pp. 147—57;
“Masterpieces of Islamic art in the Hermitage”, Arts & the Islamic World XIX (1990), pp. 12—5;
“Qur’ans”, Arts & the Islamic World XXII (1993), pp. 11—7 (from the Nasser D. Khalili Collection);
"A note on the Awlād al-Ḥilī: a scribal dynasty of Fās (Fez)\textsuperscript{1}, Manuscripta Orientalia XII/2 (2006), pp. 3—7;
"More Qur’āns of the Mamlūks\textsuperscript{3}, Manuscripta Orientalia XIII/2 (2007), pp. 3—16;
"A lost work by Ibn al-Qāṭiyya\textsuperscript{4}, Manuscripta Orientalia XV/2 (2009), pp. 57—9

\textsuperscript{1} Manuscripta Orientalia* XII/2 (2006), pp. 3—7
\textsuperscript{2} Manuscripta Orientalia* XII/3 (2006), pp. 3—14
\textsuperscript{3} Manuscripta Orientalia* XIII/2 (2007), pp. 3—16
\textsuperscript{4} Manuscripta Orientalia* XV/2 (2009), pp. 57—9
\textsuperscript{5} Ayyubid Jerusalem: the Holy City in Context 1187—1250*, ed. by R. Hillenbrand and S. Auld (London, 2009), pp. 348—59
\textsuperscript{6} Manuscripta Orientalia* XVII/2 (2011), pp. 28—32